

About

WeWrite, founded in 1993, is the publishing and marketing brainchild of Delores Palmer. The idea began in a public library near Springfield, Illinois, with an effort to encourage family and community participation in children's reading. It soon developed into "WeWrite LLC," which conducts the creation of stories by groups of children of various ages. In a workshop, children, led by a professional facilitator and aided by an illustrator, are empowered to create, act, think, and dream.

First, the children are introduced to the theme of the story through a tour or short presentation. Then they are given creative license to author their story, while an illustrator sketches their ideas. The end result is a published, educational book that is enjoyable for all ages.
