

The WeWrite Process

WeWrite, LLC produces group-authored books created by kids for kids. These books deliver entertaining reading which is educational for both children and adults. Each book can be part of a series, with collateral projects such as songs, games, and web-based materials built around an initial project.

WeWrite conducts a workshop of 10-12 children gathered to brainstorm a storyline based on a brief introduction of a chosen topic. We capture their ideas, our illustrator develops sketches to go with the story, and our photographer/videographer captures expressions and actions.

Subject matter experts supply contributions to be included as factual sidebars supporting a topic. We then take the edited story, add the professional illustrations and photos, resulting in a published book about that topic from the children's perspective. WeWrite staffs the project with professionals including a project manager, workshop facilitator, editor, illustrator, photographer/videographer, and graphic designer.

WeWrite makes these books available for distribution within organizations, and to bookstores, libraries and other channels.

WeWrite manages the project, creating lasting promotional and educational tools.
